

The Straits Settlements were a group of British territories in Southeast Asia. Singapore became part of the Straits Settlements in 1826, eventually becoming a Crown colony in 1867. It was during this time that Singapore grew exponentially - establishing itself as an important trading post and welcoming an influx of immigrants from all over the world. The Straits Settlements stamp in this artwork is based on an actual stamp produced from 1937 to 1941. Featuring King George VI, this is the last stamp series of the Straits Settlements. The story of European explorers arriving on the tropical island of Singapore with all its beautiful flora and fauna is spoken of through this artwork.

This canvas print is a digital reproduction of an original artwork by Deborah McKellar.
